

Contributors

Stefano Canalis is currently a post-doctoral fellow at the University of Padua. His main research interests include synchronic and diachronic phonology – especially vowel harmony, lenition, stress, feature theory, phonologization and the regularity of sound change – as well as their historiography.

Ludovico Franco is a FCT Researcher in Linguistics at CLUNL/Universidade Nova de Lisboa. His main research interests are morphosyntax and neurolinguistics. He has published a monograph and several papers in international journals, among which NLLT, The Linguistic Review, Probus, Glossa, Transactions of the Philological Society, Language Sciences.

Rosangela Lai is currently a post-doctoral fellow at the University of Florence. She earned her PhD in Linguistics from the University of Florence, with a dissertation on the Sardinian language. Her major areas of interest are language variation, phonology, and dialectology with a special focus on minority languages.

Carmen Lepadat graduated in 2016 in Modern Languages for International Communication at Roma Tre University. Currently she has a Research Grant from Roma Tre University and she is working as the Manager of the Sino-Italian Center RM3-FZU in Fuzhou University. Her major research interest are modality, information structure and the interface between pragmatics and semantics.

Paolo Lorusso is a fellow in Linguistics in the PhD program in Comparative Language, Literature and Culture at the Faculty of Language and Literature of the University of Florence. He is also a research associate at the Center for Interdisciplinary Researches on Languages (CRIL) of the University of Salento in Lecce where he collaborates in the Neurolinguistic projects. He obtained his first PhD in Cognitive Science and Language at the Autonomous University of Barcelona in 2014. His areas of specialization are language acquisition, psycholinguistics, syntax, lexicon to syntax interface, scope discourse semantic interface, morphosyntax, processing of syntax and morphology, comparative syntax and micro-syntactic variation.

Claudia Manetti obtained her PhD in Cognitive Sciences at the University of Siena. She is currently a post-doctoral fellow at the University of Siena. Her main research interests are L1 acquisition, as well as child and adult L2 acquisition.

M. Rita Manzini is Full Professor of Linguistics at the University of Florence. She is the author of several books, including Locality (MIT Press, 1991) and (in collaboration with Leonardo Savoia) I dialetti italiani e romanci (ed. Dell'Orso, 3 vols, 2005), A Unification of Morphology and Syntax (Routledge, 2007), Grammatical Categories (Cambridge UP, 2011). She is also the author of several articles for volumes and journals, including Linguistic Inquiry, Natural Language and Linguistic Theory, The Linguistic Review, Lingua, Probus, The Journal of Linguistics, Transactions of the Philological Society. Her research focus is generative syntax and morphosyntax.

Lucia Molinu is Associate Professor in French and Romance Linguistics at the University of Toulouse II and member of the Laboratoire Bases, Corpus, Langage, at the University of Nice. Her research concerns phonology and morphology of Sardinian dialects.

Maria Luisa Pignoli is currently a PhD student at the University of Nice preparing a thesis on Arbëresh plant names. Her interest in Arbëresh lexicon led to the publication of the Arbëresh Dictionary of Portocannone and Ururi (2007). She also coordinates the Arbëresh Lexical Archive at University of Calabria.

Leonardo M. Savoia is Full Professor of Linguistics at the University of Florence. He has been the Dean of the Faculty of Education and the Director of the Department of Linguistics. He is accademico corrispondente of the Accademia della Crusca and was President of the Italian Linguistics Society (Società di Linguistica Italiana) from 2003 to 2007. His research concentrates on phonology and morphosyntax of Italian dialects and Balkan varieties, including Albanian and Aromanian, minority languages and sociolinguistics.

Giuseppina Turano is Associate Professor at the University of Venice. Her fields of research include Albanian linguistics and Arbëresh dialectology. She is author and coauthor of five books and numerous articles investigating Albanian and Arbëresh syntax, language contact, bilingualism and plurilingualism in the Arbëresh communities spread in Southern Italy.

Giuseppe Vitolo holds a PhD in Italian linguistics from the University of Florence. His research topics include phonology and morphosyntax of Italian dialects, language contact and sociolinguistics.